Lawer Estates Story

More than a decade ago, David and Betsy Lawer fell in love with and purchased one of the most unique vineyards in Calistoga. The special characteristics of this Knight's Valley vineyard inspired them to create superior, one-of-a-kind, limited production wines you can share with total confidence among family and friends.

As a third generation Alaskan banker, Betsy Lawer grew up with many of Alaska's business and community leaders. Betsy Lawer learned the banking business, art of team building and the importance of community at her father's knee. Forty five years ago, she teamed up with her husband, David, an attorney, and together, they've banked Alaskans, helping them become successful in Alaska.

Twenty years ago, they also began the business of winemaking in the Napa Valley.

As a tribute to their love of business, whether it's the banking or the winemaking business, their label harkens back to the era of fine, inscribed bonds or stock certificates, artfully merging their banking and winemaking worlds. The landscape etching on their label is one of their favorite views at the vineyard.

Lawer Estates vineyards are sustainably farmed, thoughtfully managed and meticulously maintained. The grapes are always hand-picked at harvest. The wines reflect the unique terroir and distinctive character that only an outstanding team of viticulturists, vineyard managers and winemakers can deliver.
